Buiding and history

This Reinke 13M (2004), designed by renowned German engineer Kurt Reinke, embodies solid, lightweight construction, with an aluminium hull, skeg-protected rudder, fully encapsulated propeller shaft and storm-proof rigging with double shrouds for added safety.

With an aluminium hull and 5 cm of insulation and two separate heating systems, this yacht is suitable for sailing in a variety of climates, from tropical to arctic conditions.

The fully protected central cockpit, the sail controls brought back to the cockpit, the spinnaker poles for downwind cruising and the mast rungs make it easy to handle in all conditions.

This boat has already completed numerous cruises, including Atlantic and Pacific crossings, and has been diligently maintained, with a documented history of maintenance work and upgrades and repairs carried out over the past five years.

The 3rd and current owners are selling it as their family and lifestyle expands. As digital nomads, they are now looking for a boat to accommodate up to 10 expedition members.

Engine

Inboard motor CMD ATM 70, 70 HP (2400h)

The seawater intake is welded to the hull, with the valve above the waterline for added safety.

The engine is located in a large, dedicated engine compartment where two people can work at the same time. Easy access via removable cockpit hatch.
